SpaReply is informational. The toolkit is HIPAA-aware editorial guidance — not legal, medical, or compliance advice. Final compliance decisions belong with your provider, privacy officer, and counsel.

What is in this sample

An abbreviated peek at the SpaReply MedSpa Review + Local SEO Toolkit — enough for an owner or practice manager to judge the wording, tone, and structure before paying.

This sample includes (excerpts only): the 7-question pre-post safety check and the do/don't list, three of the 20 paste-ready review-reply templates, the first three steps of the 8-step negative-review triage plus the "do not post" list, and a short Google Business Profile + local SEO sample.

The full $49 purchase delivers the polished 31-page SpaReply PDF complete pack, six focused individual PDFs (front-desk SOP, full template bank, negative-review triage, GBP + 4-week content calendar, local SEO prompts, operating cadence), and the editable Markdown / CSV source files — instantly, the moment Stripe confirms. 7-day refund.

Front-desk reply SOP — excerpt

The 7-question pre-post safety check

Run this on every public reply before it goes live. If any answer is "no," send the draft back to the practice manager.

1. Did the guest write the detail publicly first?
2. Is the reply free of treatment specifics the guest did not name?
3. Free of outcome promises (skin cleared, pain gone, results lasted)?
4. Was anything sensitive moved to a private channel?
5. Has a second person at the clinic read this?
6. Does the tone match a calm, well-run clinic?
7. Are we within 24 business hours of the review going live?

HIPAA-aware reply rules — short list

Do

- Thank the guest by first name only.
- Acknowledge the visit without naming the treatment unless the guest named it first.
- Praise the team member by first name if the guest named them.
- Invite further conversation through a private channel for anything sensitive.
- Keep replies under 60 words for 5-star and under 90 words for negative reviews.
- Have a second person read every reply before it goes live.

Don't

- Confirm or deny that someone is or was a patient at the clinic.
- Name a specific treatment the guest didn't already mention publicly.
- Reference dosages, units, brands, products, or clinical outcomes.
- Apologize in a way that admits liability before the practice manager reviews.
- Promise refunds, comps, or remedies in public — move those offline.
- Use exclamation points, emoji, or all-caps. The clinical tone is the point.

Reply templates — 3 of 20 samples

The full template bank covers seven scenarios — 5& general, staff shoutout, treatment named by the guest, neutral 3& , wait-time, pricing, and negative — across warm, polished, and clinical tones. Three samples follow.

5& praise · general · warm tone

Thank you for the kind note, [guest first name]. The team appreciated caring for you, and we're glad the visit felt calm and professional. We look forward to welcoming you back.

5& Hydrafacial · guest-named the treatment

Thank you for the kind note, [guest first name]. We're glad the visit felt refreshing, and the team enjoyed taking care of you. We look forward to welcoming you back when you're ready.

1& default · public reply, no clinical claims

We're sorry your visit didn't feel as seamless as it should have, [guest first name]. We appreciate you bringing this to our attention. Please contact our practice manager at [practice manager email] so we can listen, review the details, and follow up offline with care.

Negative-review triage — excerpt

The full playbook is an 8-step triage with sign-off blocks for the practice manager. Below: steps 1–3 and the "do not post" list.

1. Acknowledge within 24 business hours

A 1- or 2-star review left unanswered for a week reads worse than the review itself. The front-desk lead pings the practice manager the same day; the public reply does not need to be perfect, only careful.

2. Identify the guest internally — quietly

Search your booking system for the name in the review. Note their last visit, provider, and any prior issues in the internal tracker only. Do not reference any of that in the public reply.

3. Decide the lane: clinical, operational, billing, or hostile

Each lane has a different default reply. Clinical concerns route to a licensed provider. Operational issues route to the practice manager. Billing routes to the office manager. Hostile or bot-like reviews still get a calm public acknowledgement — no debate.

"Do not post" list — bring to the practice manager first

- The guest names a clinical adverse event.
- The guest names a regulator (state board, FDA, OSHA, OCR).
- The guest threatens legal action or names an attorney.
- The reply you drafted confirms a treatment the guest did not name.
- The reply you drafted apologizes for a specific outcome.
- The reply offers a refund, comp, or credit publicly.

- You can't answer "yes" to all seven safety-check questions.
